

EVERY ROOM TELLS A STORY...

...NOW ONE OF THEM CAN TELL YOURS

Your time living in London House or William Goodenough House was special.

Now you can mark those experiences by naming a room or flat. In doing so your generosity will ensure that future generations enjoy the same life changing experiences.

The Community spirit and international friendships I made here have left me with fond memories...naming my old room was the perfect way to create a permanent celebration.

(LH 1971),

WHAT WILL YOURS SAY?

Goodenough College was indeed a special place. My education did not stop at LSE, continuing into the halls of London House and the gardens of Mecklenburgh Square. While the diploma went into a frame on the wall, the friendships and the experiences have lasted a lifetime. The Square was but a small space but the residents expanded Mecklenburgh Square into a much larger global geography. To paraphrase Mark Twain "I have never let my (LSE) schooling interfere with my (London House) education."

Bill Way, USA (LH 80-81), Named room 2149

As soon as we heard about room naming, we wanted to do it, and it had to be Room 2124!

We've been friends ever since we met at Goodenough and that room was where it started. We each have so many great memories of living there. We had to name it before anyone else did!

Vishesh Chandiok, India (LH 97-99) and Ali Hassan Sajjad,
Pakistan (LH 97-98),
Named room 2124

I loved the social life here, going to the theatre and museums and being able to walk to so many places in London. Goodenough really is London's best kept secret. I had such a stimulating time here and made so many lifelong friendships. Returning to my old room is quite emotional. I have so many happy memories.

(WGH 79-82), Named room 5405

A room or flat in London House or William Goodenough House may be named for a gift of £10,000

All funds raised go towards helping maintain and sustain the long term life of the College. In this way your support will help ensure the College is able to provide remarkable opportunities for generations to come.

A room may carry the name of a loved one. Families, partners or groups of friends can name a room together. It might be named to recognise the anniversary of your time here, or the experience of several generations. A company or organisation might wish to name a room, to recognise their bond with the College and its values.

GOODENOUGH

Fond memories are embedded within the walls of room 2344 in London House. It was from where I walked to and from the Slade School of Art and where my international career really got going. It's where I proposed to my girlfriend, Christina; where I met life long friends including my son's Godfather, and from where my student dreams began to materialize into reality.

Many of you will also have strong and fond memories of 'your' room. It is where long hours were worked to get that postgraduate recognition and like me, friendships and careers were formed and developed.

Space, experience and recognition are important to all of us. I would encourage you to do whatever you can to get your name on 'your' door. After all it is a door to your memory.

John Kelly, Australia (LH 96-97), Named room 2344
